NEW ORLEANS TECHNOLOGY OFFICE
(at City Hall - 594 658-4000)

Harrison Boyd is the Chief Technology Officer in charge of implementing NOLAStat, new software which allows citizens to track crime, area by area, from the actual crime, through arrest, prosecution and conviction, to sentencing.

The City Council has approved this measure, yet City Hall, particularly Superintendent Warren Riley & Mayor C. Ray Nagin, have refused it, suggesting that the current software, contracted from their friends, is sufficient.

At last login, the current software had about a dozen links to send in money, and not one to report crime.
